RUNAWAY THAT DID NO HARM

Driving Horse Took French Leave But Reached Home Unscathed.

A peculiar runaway, which must have caused alarm all along the Waikiki road, was that of a horse and buggy hired from the Stockyard stables by Mr. E. R. Swain, the architect, last night.

"I had driven out to Waikiki," said Mr. Swain, in telling the story, "and upon discovering my friends, Ed. McFarlane and 'Bonnie' Monsarrat, in front of the coffee shop opposite the Moana hotel, I got out of the buggy and tied the horse to the railing there. We went into the shop to discuss certain business and social matters for a few moments, then all three of us went over to the Moana together to have dinner. After dining we returned to the front lanai of the hotel, and just as we came out of the door we heard a commotion among the carriages standing at the rail across the street. Before I had time to think about it a horse and buggy shot out from among the rest and vanished down the road towards town, turning the corner on two wheels and cleaving the atmosphere at a terrific rate of speed. This horse and buggy I recognized as that procured by myself from the Stockyards. There was nothing to do, as pursuit was out of the question, and I went into the hotel and telephoned the stables to look out for the wreck. Ten minutes after the horse had taken French leave of us, the man at the stables telephoned me that the horse had returned to the stables and trotted in at the door without the slightest injury to either itself or the buggy, not even a strap being broken. I returned to town in Mr. Monsarrat's rig, and the only thing that is bothering me now is whether I am to pay for the horse and buggy which thus deserted me for the time I hired it or whether I get off at half pay."

En route to town Mr. Swain burned his hand quite severely on the lamp of Mr. Monsarrat's buggy. This was the sum total of the damages in connection with the incident, so far as has been learned. Mr. Swain says, however, that if anything had met this horse and buggy on its return trip, the result might have been absolute annihilation, and that probably under this reasoning, a Chinese hack, or probably a milk wagon, may yet be reported missing.
